Riding in Gem Park

by Antonio Colantoni
illustrated by Ellen Joy Sasaki

Core Decodable 64
Gem Park is a large park. It has a nice bike path.
And it is cement.
The path is flat at first.
The cement path lasts a mile.
It runs past Pine River.
It is not as flat.
After the bridge, the path changes.
The path is uphill.
And it is gravel and cinders.
The hill is gentle at first. The ride is not bad.
Tires slip on the cinders.
Then the ride is hard.
They do not have to race.
If riders get tired, they rest.
The path is on a giant cliff. A fence makes it safe.
You see much in the distance.

At the hilltop, it's quiet.
It starts down the hill.

At the top, the path turns.
They will glide down fast.

Riders check bike brakes.
It passes the concerts shell.
The path twists and turns.
What a fun and wild ride!
The path ends at the giant rock.